Overview:

The course is intensive, case study rich, delivered lecture style with small group sessions and is limited to 16 attendees to meet the certification criteria.

The Off-Site Safety Management course (OSSM) is a two-day, foundation level course certificated by the Royal Geographical Society and is considered to be THE foundation level Risk and Safety management course for those undertaking expeditions and fieldwork. It was designed in response to concerns about safety in off-site activities. It addresses the content of legislation in this area and provides an opportunity for attendees to explore the application of the legislation and Risk Management in practical situations. The course also heavily influenced the design of British Standard 8848: the standard for overseas expeditions and fieldwork.

The OSSM course will be appropriate for those working in a range of different situations where they are responsible for taking anyone from young children on a school trip through to those leading adults (or running their own) expeditions and fieldwork around the globe. The themes and concepts are universally applicable to any off-site visit or activity. It aims to equip attendees with the ability to apply knowledge, understanding and problem-solving skills in a range of contexts. The course delivered for R2Ri is tailored to expedition/adventure/exploration activities albeit that the course will cover all aspects of off site visits.

The course is not a Risk Assessment competency qualification in itself although risk assessment is covered in the course in some detail. It is a wide ranging and intensive course designed at making you aware of necessary requirements and identify further steps you may wish to take to fill knowledge or skill gaps. We have a one day, Risk Assessment module (only for those that have done the OSSM course with us within a year). Dates are shown on the course dates page. The one day classroom attendance then requires post course study and submission of a post course risk assessment and report to management within three weeks of the classroom day.

The instructor of the OSSM course, Matthew Davies FRGS, approaches the course from a perspective of “If you are going to be responsible for someone’s safety, check them out as you would your own child” and so the course begins with considering the issues running simple trips for young people, developing the safety and group management themes building up to outdoor, adventurous and expeditionary activities, complete with numerous case studies from the sector.

Given the expertise of the lecturer, there will be plenty of opportunity to ask questions and for group discussion.

The course is taught lecture style with small group break out and discussion sessions, case studies worked on in groups then discussed as a class and plenty of opportunity for questions.

The instructor:

Matthew Davies is a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society and has been an instructor for the course since 2007/8, when the course was a level 3 course (with a 3-hour exam!) certified by OCR. Matthew has delivered the course to a wide range of organisations and individuals, ranging from expeditioners, teachers, field teams, University Students, survival instructors, outdoor activity and adventure travel instructors, through to Search and Rescue teams.

Matthew was also one of the authors of BS:8848, has been an expert lecturer to members of ABTA, the British Mountaineering Council, Mountain Training Association and leading expedition and adventure organisations. He has trained teams (both in the UK and overseas – from Asia to North America) for operations in most environments, has prepared teams for and led desert (vehicle dependent) and Arctic circle (foot) expeditions as well as undertaking jungle expeditions, has lectured at the RGS including on preparation for desert expeditions and has worked as a specialist remote area safety lecturer, trainer, advanced first aid instructor.

Matthew has experience of advising, representing (in legal proceedings) and assisting well known organisations in the outdoor activity and adventure travel sector in the aftermath of major incidents. Many case studies will be discussed during the course.

Matthew's detailed profile can be found on our website.

Origins of the OSSM course

The Off-Site Safety Management course was originally developed in partnership with the British Association of Advisers and Lecturers in Physical Education and the College of St Mark and St John by OCR. The management and administration of the Off-Site Safety Management course was passed to the Royal Geographical Society with IBG in 2008.

The Course:

Aims

- To develop knowledge and understanding of off-site safety management procedures and the ability to apply this to a range of different contexts.

- To develop ability to plan, manage and evaluate off-site activities in order to ensure the safety of the participants.
 - To develop skills that are relevant to the workplace and which can be adapted to meet different circumstances
 - To encourage further study and promote the value of continuing professional development.

Course Content

Structure of the Course

The Off-Site Safety Management course is designed to assist the delegates to develop sufficient knowledge and understanding manage groups going off-site safely.

The content is divided into three sections each representing a vital stage in managing an off-site activity/event. Increasingly complex scenarios will be considered and addressed via case studies, videos and workshops throughout the course to address the themes of the course.

The three sections are:

Planning for the event

This section addresses those aspects of planning which must be completed before the group departs in order to ensure the safe management of the activity. It includes assessing the needs of the group, arranging the necessary staffing and undertaking risk assessments.

Managing the event

This section addresses the key management requirements relating to group safety during an activity including appropriate actions and procedures required.

when dealing with both minor and major incidents and contingencies. The course will include real life case studies relevant to the client's sector of operation. The course will also include minor and major incident response at a practical level in the field and what should be in place at home base to assist. Research has shown that those who undergo mock incident scenarios perform better when real life situations arise.

Evaluating the event

This section addresses the essential review of the whole event that must be carried out to effectively improve future planning and practice.
